

THE FUTURE IS NOW: THE HUMANITIES AND ENVIRONMENTAL CRISES

FEBRUARY 8TH, 2:00-5:00 PM

IMU MAPLE ROOM

In honor of the visit to IU of a team of Scandinavian scholars investigating climate change narratives from a humanities perspective, two roundtables will bring the Indiana University community together in dialogue with our visitors. These panels will explore:

2:00-3:15 PM: Where are we and what have we achieved? - Sharing scholarly perspectives on the environment

3:45-5:00 PM: Where is the field of environmental humanities headed? - What do the humanities have to offer to addressing environmental crises?

Participants Include:

Kyrre Kverndokk (Cultural Studies, University of Bergen)
Lone Ree Milkær (Cultural Studies, University of Bergen)
Marit Ruge Bjærke (Cultural Studies, University of Bergen)
John Ødemark (Cultural History, University of Oslo)
Brandon Barker (Diverse Environmentalisms Research Team, Folklore, Indiana University)
Hall Bjørnstad (French, Indiana University)
Ben Bridges (Folklore, Indiana University)
Rebecca Dirksen (Diverse Environmentalisms Research Team, Ethnomusicology, Indiana University)
Shannon Gayk (English, Indiana University)
Diane Goldstein (Folklore, Indiana University)
Jessica O'Reilly (International Studies, Indiana University)
Lisa Sideris (Religious Studies, Indiana University)
Sue Tuohy (Diverse Environmentalisms Research Team, Ethnomusicology, Indiana University)

Co-Sponsored by: College Arts and Humanities Institute, Departments of English, Folklore and Ethnomusicology, French and Italian, International Studies, Religious Studies, The Research Council of Norway, and University of Bergen.